SOMERS- SUMMERS REUNION 2005

Written in the Burlington Times News on Sunday, June 5, 2005 is a story of a church that our ancestors help to found. Many of our ancestors are buried in the church cemetery. There were pictures along with the article with following people as they surround the altar memorial erected in 1932: Lacy Howe, Hubert Summers, Frank Lowe, Clarence Summers, Cling Gerringer and Pastor Luther R. Sloop. It is made from the steps of the second church building that stood until 1871. The other picture was of Pastor Luther R. Sloop and Clarence Summers. Erected in 1961, this wayside chapel is a miniature replica of the first church built in 1745 for Friedens Lutheran Church. It is constructed from the actual logs of the original church building. For those of you who did not see or read the article, I have it printed here. It was written by Keren Rivas.

FRIEDENS LUTHERAN CHURCH CELEBRATES ITS 260TH BIRTHDAY

REVOLUTIONARY WAR SOLDIERS ARE BURIED IN FRIEDENS CEMETERY

Friedens Lutheran Church, at the corner of Frieden Church Road and N. C. 61 North, was founded in 1745 by pre-Revolutionary pioneers who traveled more than 400 miles along the wagon road from Pennsylvania to North Carolina.

This makes it one of the oldest, if not the oldest, church in Guilford County.

Today, with a special homecoming service, the church is celebrating its 260th year anniversary.

A history room full of documents, books, artifacts and pictures, tells visitors the story behind the building and provides a glimpse into the lives of those who have worshipped in this church through the centuries.

"One of the things that amazes me about this church is how old it is," said Becky Wagoner, who has been a member for close to 45 years. She is part of the committee working on the history room for more than a decade.

The room tells a story that began one day in 1741, when German settlers started holding worship services in a small brush arbor they erected in the area that today is the churchyard.

According to a 1970 historical account written by old-time member and Sunday school teacher, Lalah G. Apple, the church initially was known as "Stahaker's Church" or "Sshaaker's Church." The name was later Anglicized to "Shoemakers' Church."

A century later, this name was dropped and the name Friedens was used instead. Friedens is German for "peace" or "tranquility."

As was often the case in early churches, the Friedens congregation was made up of people from Lutheran and Reformed denominations. It is not clear whether they conducted services together or separately. What is known for certain is that both denominations owned the property where the congregation met.

Of the stone building that once stood in the cemetery area, only the steps have remained to this day. They were used as the base of a marker that stands in the old part of the graveyard.

On top of the steps stands a block of stone and, on top of the stone, rests an open Bible with the following verse from Proverbs 22 carved in granite: "Remove not the ancient landmark which your fathers have set."

Through the years the church has done its best to do just that. Church transcripts dating back to 1800 are kept in the vault. These are written in German, which was the language of choice until 1830. Services up until that point were also conducted in German.

A small chapel in front of the church, on Frieden Church Road, was built in 1961 using the logs from the first church the settlers built. Wagoner said it serves as a place of reflection for travelers to this day.

The state has also recognized the church's heritage. A marker alongside the road reads, "organized before 1791." That was the year the state gave Friedens a grant land for 14 acres.

Although there is no official record that shows the church was founded in 1745, the different stories that through the years have been passed from generation to generation have coincided with that year. Even some of the oldest graves found in the cemetery date back to 1750.

But this church is not only devoted to preserving its past. It is also devoted to serving its community. And although there have been mergers and divisions since it was first established, the church has managed to preserve a solid congregation that nears 150.

"There are a lot of new members who have no connection with the history of the church," Wagoner said.

That was not the case when she first arrived in the 1960's.

Members of this church "use their history in the best possible ways," said Pastor Kristina Johnson. For them, she added, history is "a source of pride that opens doors for ministry."

Johnson said that in the past nine years, the church has added a contemporary worship service designed to accommodate growth. It has also adopted a strategic plan to look at the areas that need improvement.

So today, in the company of old and new friends, the church is not only celebrating its rich heritage but also its ability to adapt as times change, something that has not always been easy, Johnson said. She is the first woman pastor this congregation has ever had.

Since she became pastor in 2002, the church has gone through what Johnson calls a "change in guard." Many of the pillars of the church have passed away, something that has affected the congregation deeply. But despite the trials, Johnson said she is confident the congregation will "rise from the ashes" as they have done so many times before.

As the lyrics of a 1995 commemorative hymn say: "Their heritage of faith still blesses us today. The word of God is Friedens' strength and guide us on our way."

By 1745, and for the next 25 years, a small building made of rustic logs served as church. A second building, a two-story framed structure, was built in 1771. It had galleries on three sides and an old-fashioned high pulpit with sounding board behind the speaker.

This time ancient rock was used as the main material instead of logs. In 1790, as the congregation grew larger, an outdoor pavilion was added. Weeklong camp meetings were held there every year for the next 60 years, with two services offered each day.

One account by church historian Roland Summers tells that early Lutherans of nearby communities traveled to this area to participate in these services. Summers was the church historian until his death in May 2004.

"Blacks and whites both attended (the camp meetings), including slaves," Summers said. During the regular services, Summers continued, blacks stayed at the back of the building.

But two nights a week, the service was handed over to the blacks. When that happened, the whites went to the back of the building.

"Blacks had such a good service that whites always looked forward to it," Summers said.

In the mid-1850s, when plans started to materialize for the construction of a larger building, the Reformed segment of the congregation decided to build its own church. Today, that church is St. Mark's Reformed Church in the Elon area.

Forty years later, the church experienced another division that gave birth to two other churches: Peace Lutheran Church near McLeansville and Sharon Evangelical Lutheran Church in downtown Gibsonville.

It took some years to put together the new building, since church members had to make the bricks themselves. On May 22, 1871, the new building was finally dedicated. It stood across the street from where the church had been for more than a century.

The new church building included the white columns that adorn the entrance to this day.

Architecturally, these columns, made of melted brick, make this church different from other country churches in the area. They have defied the passing of time and even a fire in 1939 that destroyed the entire building.

Members only could save a couple of pews, the altar and the pulpit. These are now displayed in the history room. Within a year of the fire, the church was rebuilt and, since then, several areas having been added to make the church what is today.

A huge part of the church's history is in its cemetery. In talking about it, Apple wrote: "In our Friedens Cemetery sleep brave souls who dared all, and risked all, for freedom's cause. Soldiers rest here who fought in the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812, the Mexican War, the Civil War, the Spanish-American War, World War I, World War II and the Vietnam War."

There are more than 1,000 unmarked graves and seventh and eighth generations represented there. Among the early settlers buried in the cemetery is Captain Peter Summers. Summers and his son fought in the Battle of Alamance in 1771.
