CUTTING COST

On February 9, 2011, Shavon Kristin Vines Via gave a class at the Riverside Baptist Church in Graham on couponing. She is an Extreme couponer. She never thought it was out of the ordinary to purchase grocery items in quantities of 20 or 30. It was always normal for her, who refused to pay more than 50 cents for any one item, to have a two-year supply of food on hand at all times. When the TLC television show "Extreme Couponers" aired in 2010 and showed Americans a different way to pay for groceries, she was surprised. "I didn't know that what I did was extreme until I saw the show," Shavon said. "We never really told anyone. It was just our way of life." She has been perfecting the art of couponing since she was a teenager. She learned from her grandmother, whom Shavon would help clip coupons to match with sales each week. "Everyone would go to granny's grocery store, referring to her late grandmother's stockpile of food. "It looked like me." Her grandmother's memory is what inspired Shavon to start her own Facebook page to offer others advice on how to save money effectively by grocery shopping with coupons. "Coupon Kid" is the title of the page. It's the nickname her granny gave her as a child. She was featured on "Extreme Couponing" in September of 2011.
