OUR MOTTO: KEEP IN TOUCH

We trust that all of you have attended the church of your faith this morning before coming here.

The following story is a very good every day Sermon!

In the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution, Leo Aikman tells about several cotton farmers who were talking one afternoon in the country store and got into a heated discussion on the merits of their different religious denominations.

One of the farmers had been sitting quietly, just listening, when the group turned to him and demanded to know which form of religion he thought was the right one.

"Well," said the farmer, "you know there are three ways from here to the cotton gin. You can go over the big hill. That's shorter, but it's a hard climb.

"You can go around the east side of the hill. That's not very far, but the road is really rough.

"Or you can go around the west side of hill, which is the longest way, but the easiest.

"But you know," he said, looking the other squarely in the eye, "when you get there, the man at the gin don't ask you which way you came. He just asks, 'How good is your cotton?'"

The old prospector was talking to his visitors from the East.

"There I was," he said. "The grizzly bear down in the canyon was behind a tree. The only way I could hit him was to ricochet a bullet off this high canyon wall on my right. Well, I had gauged my windage, calculated the lead of the barrel and the rate of twist, the hardness of the bullet and the angle of yaw it would have after being smacked out of shape against that canyon wall, and I judged my chances were 60-40 I would get my bear."

There was a long silence.

Then one of his listeners asked rather timidly, "Did you hit him?"

"Nope," spat out the old man — "I missed the wall."
